

Call For Applications: <<DAKSH - NCLT Coalition Fellowship>>

I. About DAKSH

DAKSH is a non-profit think tank working since 2015 on the rule of law by improving the functioning of courts and tribunals. We leverage perspectives from data, technology, processes, institutional ecosystem, and administration. Our focus has consistently been on unveiling ground realities and advocating for citizen-centric systemic reforms within the law and justice system.

Our work in the last four years has set the agenda for reimagining courts and tribunals for the future. We work closely with the committees of the Supreme Court and High Courts, tribunals, and governments to realise this vision.

II. Project Overview

DAKSH is convening the Coalition for NCLT/NCLAT for research and advocacy on the transformation of these two institutions. It will work closely with legal practitioners, industry leaders, researchers, and policymakers towards practicable reforms in these institutions. The coalition will also work closely with senior legal practitioners, and ‘users’ who frequently appear in these tribunals as litigants and understand the cost of delays, unclear practices, and uncertainty.

III. Fellowship

We are seeking motivated and passionate student fellows to join our coalition to do in-depth research and create a body of work that throws light on the workings of these institutions. As a student fellow, you will have the unique opportunity to contribute to impactful research, policy analysis, and advocacy efforts by being part of the DAKSH team, which will be the secretariat of the NCLT/NCLAT Coalition.
